THE insurance companies throughout the country are rapidly taking advantage of the new Ohio law authorizing the deposit of county and municipal bonds with the State Treasurer to insure Ohio patrons against loss. The old law only authorized the use of State and United States bonds.

JUDGE COOLEY, the veteran jurist and expounder of constitutional law, in a recent lecture before the senior law class of the University of Michigan, alluded to the Coxey movement and defined clearly the unconstitutionality of the "petition with boots on." He explained that citizens may petition for legislation; but they cannot command it, even if they should visit the Federal capital by hundreds of thousands, and, assuming to speak for the people, demanding an enactment of specific measures. In a government like ours the legislative power is delegated to representatives. No one except these elected delegates has the right to assume or to pretend to represent the popular will. To permit of the intimidation of legislative bodies by tumultuous assemblies would mean the substitution of mob rule for representative government.

OF CITIZES TO MAKE MEETING ARRANGEMENTS

For Celebrating the Day!

Quite a goodly number of citizens met at the City Hall Monday eyening, to make arrangements for celebrating the coming 4th of July.

On motion, A. Bradley was called to the chair and Sheriff Deckermade

L. L. Orwig, H. C. Groschner, and E. E. Decker was appointed a committee on finance.

On motion of H. C. Groschner a committee on arrangements, consisting of five members, including Chairman Bradley, to be appointed by the chair, resulted in the selection of the following: A Bradley, Henry Cary, H. Gathman, Geo. H. Rohrs and John H. Frease.

The meeting was enthusiastic and harmonious, and but one spirit seemed to prevail-that of celebrating the glorious 4th of July upon a grand scale, making the day for 1894 one to be long remembered in the history of Napoleon.

Let the good citizens of Napoleon come to the aid of the committee of arrangements, and our beautiful little city will be ablaze with enthusiasm and patriotism on the 4th, and thousands of strangers will be our guests on that day, to accept our hospitality and enjoy with us the amusements of the day.

The celebration in Napoleon will be the grandest 4th of July celebration in this part of the State, and an invitation is extended to everybody to be present.

Some day Bro. Russell will be dubb ed "Windy" if he does not learn to 'cut 'er short." "Brevity is the spice of life," Bro.

This will affect the cities of Cleve land, Cincinnati, Toledo and other places along the line of the canals. The injunction will be based, among others, on the ground that no part of the canal system of Ohio can be aban-doned by the legislature without first obtaining the consent of the general government. When the canal system was established the general government ceded to Ohio thousands of acres pplied to the construction, the conditions being that the water ways be kept open at all times for free transportation of troops, arms and supplies

This lends a new phase to the question and if the United States courts are appealed to and the cause has to run the gauntlet of them the state will realize very little for this question-able piece of jobbery that darkened the last days of the session of the legislature just adjourned. Reflected Light. A dead white surface has decided advantages for reflecting light over a looking glass or a bright surface. Good white blotting paper reflects back 82 per cent of the light cast upon it. Many persons are under the impression that looking glass must be a better reflector than paper or whitewashed surface because with looking glass a strong shadow can be cast, while from a dead surface no heavy shadow is obtained. The reason is not so much that the reflected light is less from the dead surface, but that the reflection is concentrated in the case of the looking glass. With paper or whitewash it proceeds from a vast number of points.-Brooklyn Citizen.

But when it comes to a very large mercantile, manufacturing or commer cial enterprise, the situation is differ ent. The complications that arise are numerous. The receiver has to learn the business to begin with. Then he has to get acquainted with all the creditors, ascertain what their claims are and how pressing they may be, and fix up a scheme that will be mutually agreeable all around. He has to make an inventory of the assets and liabili-ties. When this inventory is completed he sizes the situation states the condition of affairs in a report to the court. If the court is satisfied that the creditors ought to accept the conditions prescribed by the re-ceivers it issues an order to that efect. If it thinks the outlook is bad and the chance of the creditors being repaid is very slight, it orders the receiver to wind up the business and pay the creditors the largest percentage Probably the best way to explain the of the matter.

work and duties of a receiver is to take well-known case as an illustration. No failure of recent years has so shaken the commercial world and at the time threatened such disastrous results as that of the National Cordage company. Millions of dollars were in-volved when the great corporation asked for a receiver. The shares, both preferred and common, were listed on the New York Stock Exchange. They had been selling at a high figure. Good round dividends had been paid. The concern was supposed to be in splendid condition. When the crash came everybody was startled. The company was organized under the laws of the State of New Jersey. Consequently, when it went down, application for a receiver had to be made to they got half of what was due them. the court of chancery of that common-wealth. Chancellor McGill heard the Mr. Young started with the reorganication for a receiver had to be made to motion at Jersey City. He named the zation project. A magnificent set of receivers. He appointed as first receiver Edward F. C. Young, president of the First National bank of Jersey were bank presidents. Young declined City. Mr. Young is the star receiver to accept the men selected. He de of the country. He has made a repudined not because they were unaccept tation in that line. It will appear further on that his success with the Cordage corporation entitles him to the rank he had partially attained when he pulled the Dixon Crucible Works, manufacturers of the Dixon pencils, crucibles, etc., out of the one that prevailed last summer a hole some years ago.

Chancellor McGill appointed Young because he knew his ability in the receiver line. He required large bail.

The bank men agreed with him, and the reorganization committee finally chosen consisted of members of banking firms and business men. which Mr. Young furnished without difficulty. To show how long it takes to fix up a receivership of this kind, it needs to be stated that it will probably require two certs to redeem the liquidation certificates, and until they are redeemed Messra. Young and Lozer will remain as receivers. Mr. Young sold the old National Cordage company to the new corporation, known as the United States Cordage company, but he is still engaged in winding up the former comengaged in winding up the former com-It is usually the custom for a receiver, when he has fi shed his work, to make up a detailed statement and pre-

If the work has been especially well done the court often allows an extra compensation to the receiver. In the case of the Dixon Crucible company, Hon. Theodore Run-yon, the present United States ambassador to Germany, was chancellor of New Jersey, and so pleased was he with Mr. Young's statement that he praised him in the highest terms from the bench and ordered that he be paid an extra amount per annum for every year he served. It required a number of years to get that business on its feet. Young took it when it was practically a wreck, and when he turned it back, brough the court, to the stockholders it was earning a dividend of ten per cent. In the case of the Cordage re-ceivership the settlement will be made between the receivers and the reorgan ization committee, and the court will practically have nothing to do with it. that have turned an apparently bank-rupt corporation, by means of reorgan-

Following the Cordage failure as a sample of such affairs, it can be stated that so soon as Young and Lozer were appointed, had qualified through their bondsmen and taken their oaths of office, they took possession of the busi-spirit, and therefore his name will be used almost solely in narrating what was done. It should be borne in mind, however, that Mr. Lozer was associated closely and consulted always in every step that was taken. After Young had taken possession of the office of the Cordage company, 135 Front street, New York, he sent for the creditors. Perhaps it would be more accurate to remark that the creditors came without invitation.

They wanted to know where they stood. They filed their respective claims and asked for justice. There is no preference in such cases. The re ceiver regards every claim primarily as of equal importance. But the creditors are always very pressing and very persistent. Each considers his very persistent. Each considers his claim as paramount. In a case of sideration, it requires a firm head and Mr. Young possesses those qualities. After he had looked the ground over and formulated a plan of operations, he stuck to his decision. Nobody could move him. It will always redound to his credit, that the big banks and large banking houses of the me-tropolis, nearly all of whom were deep-ly concerned in Cordage, came around to Young's views, after energetically opposing them at the start.

Mr. Young originated a new idea in receiverships during the Dixon crucible in fact almost uniformly, it is the duty pay the creditors as much as possible and report the results to the court.

Young adopted a novel plan. When he found the concern could be continued at a profit, he advised the court that it should not be wound up. It used to be the custom, in case raw material was on hand, to convert such material into a manufactured product, sell the product and then stop operations. Young reversed this mode of procedure in the Dixon case and repeated it in the Cordage. He made up his mind it would be folly to wind up the concern. If that were done the creditors would only get from forty to sixty per cent. of their claims, the numerous enterprises interested would be sacrificed and one of the great arteries of trade would stop flowing. He advised that manufacture be continued and that the entire project be kept in business and allowed to grow and expand. The chancellor followed his suggestion, although he took a big lor had for Mr. Young's judgment that he permitted his wishes to be carried out simply upon the latter's request and without any personal examination

The creditors were at first indignant and surprised at the receiver's course, and then, amazed at his firmness, they gradually became converts to his plan

They all signed documents concurring in his methods, and from that time on the task was comparatively easy. Mr.

Young says he spent day after day conversing with the various creditors. Many of them threatened him, others begged him to desist. To all of them he was pleasant, but dignified and determined. He outlined his scheme and refused to swerve from it. He told the
